

Signage and Emergency Lighting Around your Building

Fal Fire
PROTECTION LTD

Dedicated to safety

Do You Know Your Legal Responsibilities?

Signage is the Cinderella of Fire Protection; but proper and adequate signage throughout your premises is a vital part of your preparedness for emergency events. It is so important it has its own regulations and British Standard. In darkness smoke and confusion people will be looking for anything that will guide them to safety and that is the task of your signs. Properly located they will offer a continuous sequence of guidance to safety. These, backed up by properly located emergency lights, will help to expedite escape for frightened people faced with an emergency evacuation scenario.

All signs are not created equal. There are cheap signs which tick the box, but which will not hold their bright photoluminescence for long periods; and there are better signs which will glow brightly for hours. We use only high quality, high luminance signs, so if you have an emergency involving a power outage staff can still navigate safely and promptly out of the building.

The signs above are as they normally appear as seen in normal light

Above, is the same display after being exposed to light, now glowing in the dark to show you your way out. Once plunged into darkness, these bright "breadcrumbs" offer a vital line of escape to often panicky and confused people

LEFT - We now fit LED type emergency lighting because it is has become cheap, effective and reliable. Emergency lighting is not just for fires. It is for when the power goes down and people need to be able to see. It helps prevent unnecessary accidents and keeps you compliant. Imagine the moment when the power goes out. A moment later, the alarming darkness is dispelled by these bright, powerful units.

We even recommend householders to consider fitting one close to their electricity supply cupboard.

Walk around your building and ask yourself how easily someone could navigate around if the light goes. If you would like a signage survey, or to discuss your emergency lighting arrangements with us, please telephone and we will send a specialist free of charge, to check out your arrangements and make any necessary recommendations
